

WE ARE LOOKING FOR GREAT INSTRUCTORS TO TEACH THE NEXT GENERATION OF PARAMEDICS.

The first class of paramedics graduated from Daniel Freeman, one of the first paramedic education programs in the country over 37 years ago. Today, the UCLA-Daniel Freeman Paramedic Education Program continues the proud tradition, graduating over 600 graduates since 1999.

We are asking you to share your knowledge, your skills, and your insights with our students
as a Clinical Instructor for the UCLA-Daniel Freeman Paramedic Program.

General Description:

The Clinical Instructor's primary responsibilities include teaching, evaluating, and testing skills for paramedic students at our program located in Inglewood.

Benefits:

These are per diem positions (starting rate is $20 per hour).

- Teach only two days a month with convenient schedules that allow you to work around your current job.
- Recertify your ACLS, PALS, PHTLS, and BLS provider certifications with ease.
- Scholarships to obtain and maintain ACLS, PALS, PHTLS and BLS instructor certifications (a savings of up to $225 per course)!

Job Requirements:

- What is needed is the desire to share your knowledge and instill clinical excellence. While previous teaching experience is preferred, it is not required.
- Current licensure as a paramedic or RN.
- One-year work experience as a paramedic or relevant clinical experience.
- BLS and ACLS provider certifications (instructor certifications are preferred).
- PALS/PHTLS provider/instructor certifications are preferred.
